

Mozes Management team

Dorrian Porter

Dorrian is the founder and CEO of Mozes. He is an entrepreneur who co-founded HigherMarkets, an on-demand software company in March 2000. He later became CEO and led it to its acquisition by a Nasdaq listed company in 2002. Dorrian worked with the combined company until July 2005, where he helped significantly grow the business and shape the company's product offerings. Previously, Dorrian practiced law at Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati in Palo Alto, California where he represented a wide range of tech companies. Prior to joining WSGR, he worked in Canada as an associate at McCarthy Tetrault, an analyst at Harrowston, Inc. (now TD Capital) and at the Canadian Parliament, including the Prime Minister's Office. Dorrian received his law degree and MBA from the University of Toronto and a bachelor's degree in Public Policy and Administration from the University of Ottawa.

Aaron Clark

Aaron is the Vice President of Business Development at Mozes. Prior to joining Mozes, he spent six years in management roles at Citadon, an on-demand provider of web-based collaboration solutions backed by Warburg Pincus and Insight Venture Partners. At Citadon, Aaron oversaw customer service and managed infrastructure operations, overseeing two global datacenters that supported customers such as Ikea, General Motors and GE. Prior to Citadon Aaron was a Field Engineer for Minneapolis-based Vital Images, the leading provider of 3D medical visualization and analysis software. Aaron holds a master's degree in GIS and bachelor's degree in Geography, Mathematics and Chemistry, all from Minnesota State University, where he also played intercollegiate football and baseball.
